TRI1.0 Find Trials

- 1

The purpose of this initial screen should be to offer the simplest search possible while still having primary filters available. Cancer type is the only required element. Rather than following this with a complicated screen of filters, additional filters will be optional in the search results.
- 2

Drug name (guided free text), modality (drop-down menu), mechanism of action (drop-down menu), and molecular target (guided free text) have been chosen here as primary filters.

TRI2.0 Trials Results

- 1
- The Advanced Search Filters button will cause the filters panel to slide in from the right, letting the user know what is selected and allowing fine-tuning of the search.
- 2
- The tabbed elements for Lilly Trials and All Trials allow the user to see only Lilly trials in the listing versus every trial that matches the filters. The numbers in the tabs represent the number of search results.
- 3
- This Advanced Search Filters panel slides in from the right when the Advanced Search Filters button is pressed. It's recommended that the screen beneath it still be partially visible but shaded dark to avoid user confusion.
- 4
- The panel can be closed by either tapping the X button or tapping in the margin outside the panel.

TRI3.0 Trial Detail

- 1

This screen will still use the HCP and patient summary sections, but they should be skinned in a way to resemble tabs and use the same tab structure as elsewhere in the app.
- 2

This new recruiting button will take the user to the appropriate information on clinicaltrials.gov when tapped.

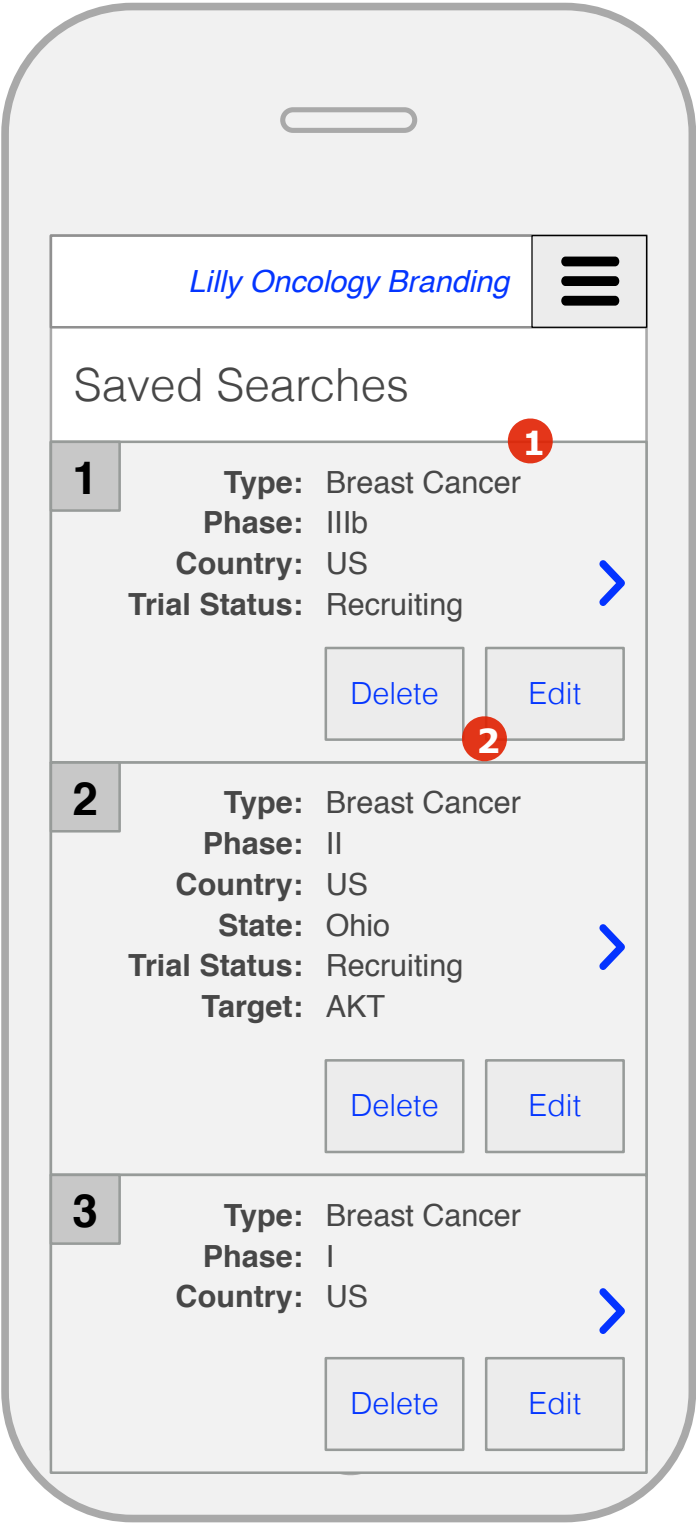

SAV1.0 Saved Searches

- 1

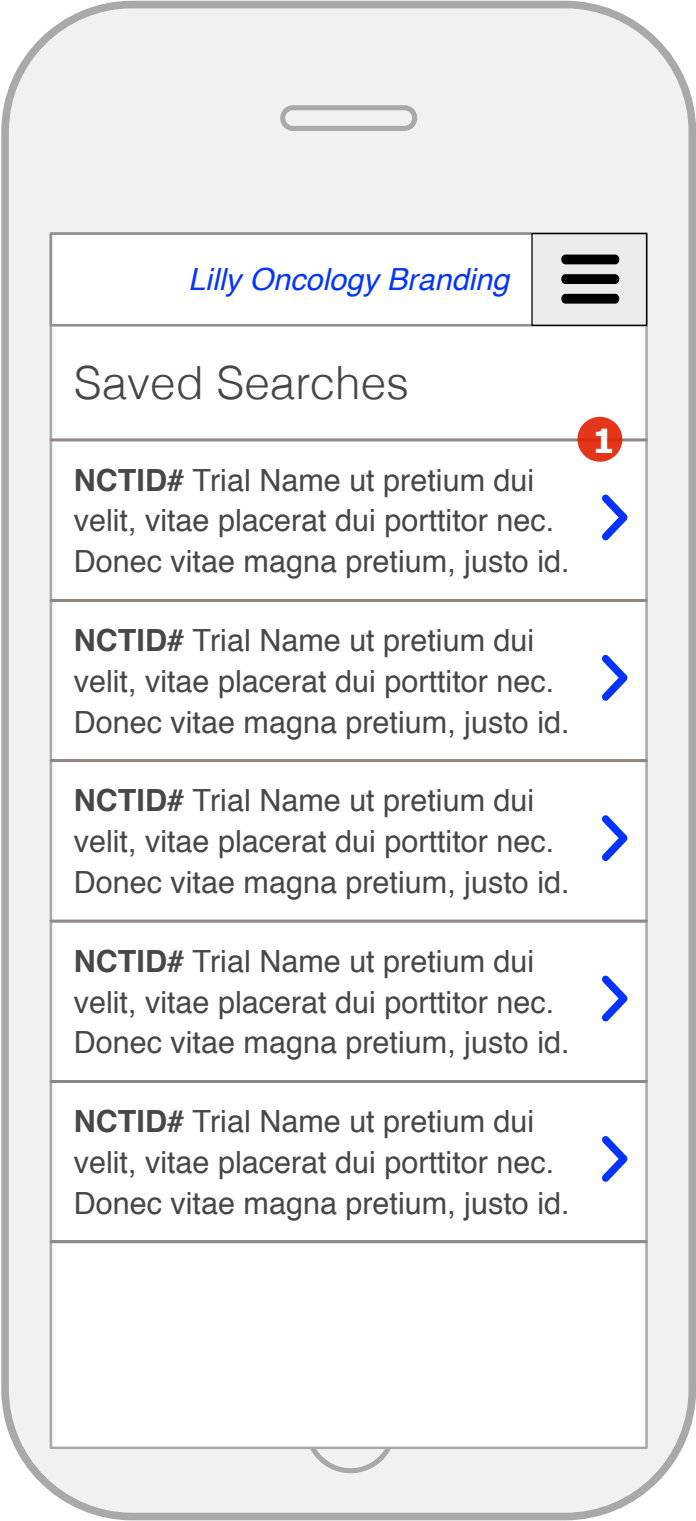

Saved searches will be shown with all of their search criteria. To save space, only criteria the user selected should be shown for each saved search.
- 2

Each search can be edited (which would open the Advanced Search Filter panel on this screen for editing) or deleted from the list. Tapping anywhere else on the search performs the search and takes the user to TRI2.0.

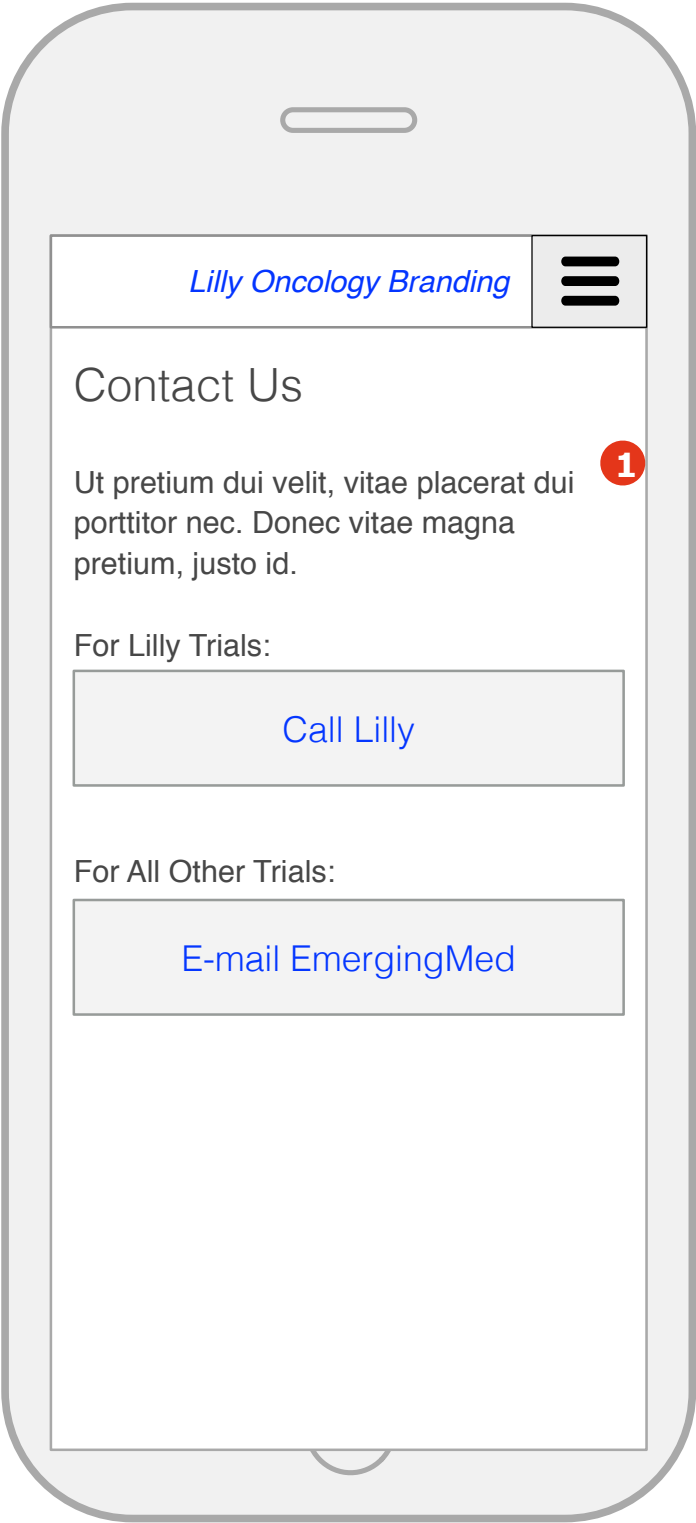

STR1.0 Saved Trials

1 To avoid confusion, saved trials should be formatted in the same way that trial results are formatted on TRI2.0.

CON1.0 Contact Us

1 The Contact Us page is now a page instead of a sliding pop-up. It's recommended that text explaining the difference between the two types of trials and explaining who to contact be added to the top of the page.

RES1.0 Resource Library

- 1

Drop-down menus will still be used as filters, but the resources should be reorganized into new proposed buckets.

These new resource categories should be used.

Drop-down menus will still be used as filters, but the resources should be reorganized into new proposed buckets. Since there are more buckets than are recommended after reorganization, it's recommended that these categories be consolidated so that the user experience can be simplified.

These new resource categories should be used.
